FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Forum opens this week bringing historic space back to life

MINNEAPOLIS (April 22, 2010) – The City Center space left vacant by Goodfellows restaurant in 2005 is headed back to the future with Forum, the latest concept from Jim and Stefanie Ringo of Ringo Restaurants, Inc. Forum will open to the public this Friday, April 23.

The City Center space is listed on the national historic register for its exceptional Art Deco interior. The Art Deco style, with its zigzag woodwork, etched mirrors and glass chandeliers was originally designed and built as the Saxe Moving Picture Theater in 1914. Jim and Stefanie Ringo have restored the space to its original glory along with many updated enhancements with help from local design firm, Shea, Inc. and Rich Brothers Construction company.

In 1930, The Forum Cafeteria was built as a remodel of the Saxe and had a successful run for more than 40 years. In 1976, it reopened as a nightclub, Scottie's on Seventh and in 1979, after much heated debate over its historical significance, the building was demolished to make way for City Center. The stylized Art Deco interior, however, was carefully removed and placed in storage. In 1983, it was reinstalled for Scottie's on Seventh as it reemerged in a new City Center spot at 40 S. 7th Street. Over the next several years the space changed hands a few times and was home to Paramount Café, Mick's and finally Goodfellows, which closed in 2005.

"In 1930, the Forum Cafeteria was a symbol of hope and celebration for people as it opened in the midst of a depression. It was successful because it responded to the needs and emotions of people at that time and offered them a comfortable public gathering place. Eighty years later, we're doing the same thing," states Jim Ringo, who is thrilled to once again share the history and architecture with the public. He states, "It's a real treasure that we needed to make available to the public again."

The Ringos' enthusiasm for history and architecture is also echoed in their passion for good food. Jim describes the Forum concept as "American chop house and regional comfort food." The Ringos have partnered with chef Christian Ticarro, who worked for eight years at the former Canyon Grille in Coon Rapids and has been invited on several occasions to cook at the James Beard House in New York. Forum's menu will feature chop house fare, (grill items, steaks and chops,) regional comfort food (Cincinnati-style chili and Southern fried chicken,) and a special section each month dedicated to the food, drink and culture of a unique U.S. regional destination, with New Orleans up first when the restaurant debuts. The restaurant will serve lunch and dinner, with breakfast on the weekends.

The Ringo's first restaurant venture, Ringo, opened last week in the new Shops at West End development in St. Louis Park.
